THE EDITOR'S CHAIR.

HOW THINGS LOOK FROM OUR STAND POINT.

The Opinion of The Editor and the Opinion of Others which we Can Endorse on the Various Topics of the Day.

The political center of attraction this Fall is in Ohio and New York. This is to be the skirmish fight for 1892, and the result will have a strong bearing in naming the candidates for both parties. In Ohio it is of special interest, in so far as it will be a test of the McKinley bill in the author's own State, and it will also test the strength of the reform movement. Both parties claim to be confident of success. A very strong and interesting campaign is being waged. An arrangement has been made for a public discussion between Mr. McKinley and Gov. Campbell. Much interest is being felt in this debate. Gov. Campbell will open in a speech of an hour and ten minutes, and be followed by McKinley in an hour and a half speech, and a reply by Campbell of twenty minutes. There are a great number of both Democratic and Republican speakers from other States in the field and a thorough canvass in every respect is being made. In New York the Democratic candidate, Mr. Flower is claimed by both the friends of Hill and Cleveland, and his election is expected to have its full weight in the next Democratic convention.

It is very gratifying to all good citizens of the State at the remarkably fine showing of educational work, so far this fall. And we believe this is the beginning of a grand era for North Carolina, to do her noble work along this line. The University has made an opening that far surpassed the expectations of even her most sanguine friends. Wake Forest, Davidson, Trinity and the A. and M. College have the most promising prospects of their useful careers. Every high school in the State, both for boys and girls, have had very flattering opening, and a general feeling of educational enthusiasm pervades the whole State. The last legislature deserves much credit for their work. They dealt very generously—not extravagantly—with this work, and had they accomplished no other great work, they deserve the highest blessing for ever having convened. And, ere long, it will be seen they acted very wise, cautious and for the good of North Carolina.

While Mr. Wannamaker is attending to his Sunday school, he had better see about his mail system about which he gives himself so much praise. Complaints come from many sources of the negligence or ignorance or both in the mail service. In the short distance of thirty-five miles from this office it takes mail from two weeks to a month to reach it, and often it never gets there at all. Such negligence might have been reasonably excused at first, when the new agents had just commenced to learn but it has now been three years, and if they can do better they should be made to do so, and if they can't, they ought to put some one in charge who can. It is an outrage on our people to be made to suffer the inconveniences of such an inefficient mail system for which they pay. And if Mr. Wannamaker has enough generosity to keep up his Sunday school, he certainly ought to have a proper sense of a moral obligation to give valuable service for which he is paid.

It is very amusing to read in parallel advice given to the farmers before and after their organization of the Alliance. Before they organized enough could not be said, and advice too strong could not be given, urging them to organize. The papers and politicians were especially urgent. But now how is it? Before, they said the hope of the country was in this organizing and taking an interest in politics. Now they preach the doctrine of rulnation for doing the very thing they so strongly advised. Be consistent, men. Surely you can peacefully and quietly abide by the acceptance of your counsel.

News from Russia about the condition of the poorer classes is distressing. Whole peasant populations are out of bread, and destitution and famine are staring thousands and thousands in the the face, and relief seems well-nigh impossible. The government must furnish bread or wholesale death is the inevitable result. The trouble connected with this is in distributing it. The severe Russian winter is upon them, and time can not be lost. Additional taxes must be extorted and Russian Nihilism will follow. And still the country is trying to prevare for war with one of Europe's strongest nations.

The Morganton Herald gives the following very interesting figures on the Southern corn crop:

"It will surprise many people to know that the value of the corn crop raised in the South in 1890 exceeded the cotton crop in value by $12,000,000. The figures show that the cotton crop for that year amounted to 7,312,725 bales of the cash value of $210 000 000, while the corn crop of 529,748 000 bushels was valued at $252,157,212."

If our farmers will pay more special attention to corn, tobacco, wheat, hay and live stock and not so much to cotton the country would be more prosperous. And our cotton crop will not be sacrificed at 7 cents per pound.

THE SOUTH'S INDUSTRIAL GROWTH.

The most trying period which the industrial growth of the South has ever encountered, and doubtless the most trying that it will ever have to fact, has been that covered by the last nine or ten months. * * * * * *

The way in which the South has stood the strain has surprised the financial world, and has materially strengthened the confidence of the capitalists of the North in the great future of this section.

The panic is passing away; the whole country is entering upon a period of unprecedented prosperity, and in all human probability the next two years will be toe most active in industrial advancement in the history of our country. * *

During the last nine months the South has continued to establish new manufacturing enterprisess. In that time 2,472 new concerns have been organized, which is only 700 less than in the great "boom" period covering the first nine months of 1891. The list of new enterprises for the first nine months of the year was as follows:

Iron furnaces,	6
Machine shops and foundries	72
Agricultural implement factories	12
Flour mills	40
Cotton mills	58
Furniture factories	38
Gas works	20
Water works	77
Carriage and wagon factories	26

Importance to Farmers.

Owing to the failure of the crops of Europe it is very necessary and important for the farmers to pay special attention to raising more food supply. It will not only serve to feed millions of people in want, but it will be of financial importance to the farmers.

The Manufacturers' Record which is decidedly the best authority we have on such important subjects, has the following very interesting and valuable information on this subject:

"The failure of European crops assures a demand at good prices for every bushel of wheat and corn that we can spare and we will enter the crop year of 1892 with very low stocks of grain. Even should the year of 1882 duplicate the enormous yield of cereals in 1891 and Europe have fair crops prices must inevetably be well maintained, for in July, 1892, our stocks of wheat and corn will be very nearly, if not quite as low as in July 1891. Moreover, the opening of the German and other markets to American pork will materially help to increase the price of bacon and corn.

Fortunately the farmers of the South have this year raised from 75,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels of grain more than in 1890, and the South has been made richer by at least $75,000,000 by it. But next year must show a still a greater increase in wheat, corn and oats in the South, and also in the raising of provisions. It may be accepted witout question that grain and provisions will continue high for at least two years, even if 1892 gives us the largest crops ever produced, and if the crops of that year should be small the Southern farmer who has to buy his foodstuffs will have a bad time of it."

THE BIRD LAW.

The Old Law With the Amendments Adopted by the Last Legislature.

The law, Section 2,834 of the Code is as follows:

"No person shall kill or shoot, trap or net any partridges, quail, doves, robins, lark, mocking birds, or wild turkeys, between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of October of each year, and the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not exceeding ten dollars for each offence."

This section was amended by the last Legislature by striking out the words "first day of April and fifteen day of October," and substituting therefor the words "fifteenth day of March and first day of November."

ALLIANCE IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

President Butler of the State Alliance was in the West last week with Gen'l Weaver on a lecturing tour. The President will commence the work of organizing the District Lecture's Bureau at Lenoir (Eighth District) on to-day, October 1st.

THE CROP OF 1891.

The latest issue of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, of New York, gives a statement of the cotton crop of the United States for the year ending September 1st, 1891. Total crop for the year stated reached 8,665,518 bales, while the exports are 5,790,634 bales, and the spinners' taking are 2,687,541 bales, leaving a stock on hand at the close of the year of 228,684 bales. The crop of 1891 shows a total of 8,655,518 bales, weighing 4,326,490,045 pounds, as the crop of 1890.

ANNE BISSELL.

By AUGUSTA LARNED

SYNOPSIS!

CHAPTER I tells how young Dr. Tibbets takes up his abode in Mrs Bissell's village boarding house, where pretty Annie, a high school graduate, is an interesting figure. Miss Carver, another boarder, indulges in some opinions about the newcomer and Annie.

CHAPTER 2.—Dr. Tibbets makes himself very popular in the household, a fact noticed and noted down, too, by Miss Carver.

CHAPTER 3.—Miss Carver and Widow Harkaway, a gossiping villager, discusses the doctor and Anne, and feel in duty bound to tell the young girl that the new boarder is already engaged.

CHAPTER 4 tells how a sum of marked money is stolen from Mrs. Bissell, and the doctor becomes active in hunting for the thief. Suspicion resting upon the sole servant girl of the household, she leaves in disgust, and pretty Annie is compelled, much to the satisfaction of Miss Carver, to go into the kitchen to work.

CHAPTER V.

She found her mother sitting in the arm-chair bolt upright.

Anne was obliged to help get the dinner, so burn her pretty cheeks over the cook stove, and blacken her white hands with dishwashing. Miss Carver came to the kitchen as often as possible to see the auburn haired princess in her fallen state. Anne turned her back on her brusquely, for she disliked dishwashing, and greasy pots and kettles filled her soul with abhorrence. It was painful to be exulted over by her enemy, who, in her hypocritical voice, assumed that Anne was very fortunate to have the opportunity to learn housework, which, in her position in life, would prove useful. There was no time now for piano practice or those little skirmishes of pleasantry in which Anne and the doctor had been wont to indulge. She could not even snatch a moment of time to regale his horse, Buckskin, with lumps of sugar. The doctor made excuses for frequent visits to the kitchen, and came to the conclusion that Anne was prettier there than when they were singing their songs together in the little parlor. His Cinderella needed no fairy godmother to heighten her charms.

Miss Carver had now great budgets of news to carry to the Widow Harkaway. The two dear friends spatted rather more than usual, as the widow had made up her mind that the doctor had taken the money, and could not be moved from her intrenched position. The doctor knew that the part he had assumed in the matter was telling against him in the town. His zeal in what was considered a wrong direction had led the Irish to include him in the general boycott against the Bissell family, and had stirred up some prejudice in other quarters, but when he looked at Anne he felt he would have imperiled his position five times over for her sake.

One August afternoon a telegram came to the doctor summoning him to a friend suddenly taken ill in a city hotel. There was just time to catch the train, with hardly a minute to spare, but as he was rushing out of the door, bag in hand, he remembered something left undone and turned back to the parlor, where his landlady was sitting. "By the way, Mrs. Bissell, here is my board for the week," and he placed a folded bill in her hand, then turned and again dashed away. When Anne came to the room a few minutes later she found her mother sitting in the armchair bolt upright, quite stiff and rigid, as if stricken with paralysis. Her brows were knit, her white lips pinched together, and she sat gazing stupidly before her, with the bill the doctor had given her tightly clinched in her hand.

"Mother! mother!" cried Anne, "is it that bad stitch in your side?" and the girl stood panic stricken gazing at her mother's white face.

"Oh, Anne! what a blow this will be to you!" and she mechanically held out the bill.

Anne took it and turned it over in her hand.

"Don't you see?" said Mrs. Bissell in an agitated whisper. "He was in a great hurry to catch the 2:40 train, and he pulled this bill out of his pocket hurriedly and thrust it into my hand for board money."

The color had left Anne's face. She brought the bill close to her eyes and examined it all over, and in one corner she detected a faint capital B with a little cross in blue ink close beside it. "Don't you see it, Anne?" she asked feebly, rocking back and forth with her apron to her eyes. "And I had grown so attached to him, almost as if he was one of our own folks. I was so glad to have him here, and now it seems as though my heart would break."

It was now Anne's turn to sink down on the sofa trembling and white as chalk. "You don't mean, mother, that you think he robbed you? You would not dare to say it," and the color rushed back in an impetuous flood to Anne's face.

"I don't know what to think, Anne. I'm completely stunned. He might have been up. You know he told us how poor he was when he was trying to get up a practice at Kettletas. Perhaps it was a sudden temptation, and he thought he could put the money back before I should discover the loss. You know some folks thought it was queer he should take such an interest in trying to catch the thief, and his efforts have come to just nothing at all. It might have been done to cover up."

"Only such town gossips as Miss Carver and Widow Harkaway ever suspected any wrong motive on his part. Why, he was just goodness itself, Mother Bissell, and you know he was, and now you are turning against him."

"I don't believe you would think he could do any wrong if you saw him in the act," returned Mrs. Bissell with mild asperity.

"I refuse to believe this, mother, for it is unreasonable and impossible," and Anne boldly put on an air of perfect assurance. "He has received this horrid bill in change somewhere and hasn't looked at it. Do you think he would incriminate himself if he was a thief and had robbed the bureau drawer?"

"Don't seem like it, Anne," said Mrs. Bissell gloomily, sinking her chin into the hollow of her hand. "But a body never knows what folks will do when they think themselves safe from getting found out, and he came to us a perfect stranger, and we did take up with him and trust him to beat all. It all comes back to me now as clear as daylight. He was up chamber a good while that day gran'ther was sick, and the old man is most blind anyway and in a doze. He wouldn't have noticed what the doctor was doing there round the bureau."

"Don't talk that way," cried Anne, getting up with fury and flinging herself round the room. "It's vulgar and low. I tell you he's a gentleman, and I'll stake my life on his honesty."

"Now, Anne, you needn't go into hysterics. Didn't he say he was poor that day he came, that he was starved out of Kettletas? I forgot all about it when I saw his nice office furniture, and the horse and carriage that cost him over three hundred dollars. Mebbe he was wee tempted and fell for the first time, and as for his giving me the bill, it was all a mistake. He was in a hurry and forgot himself and pulled out the wrong one. I can't keep him here any longer, Anne. I don't know how to treat him or even how to look him in the face. I must make some excuse to get him out of the house."

Anne felt it was time to clap on the screws, and exercise the full force of her daughterly authority. "You won't do any such thing, Mother Bissell. You don't mean to ruin his prospects for life. You don't want old Carver and the Widow Harkaway to trumpet this little thing from one end of Littlefield to the other. All that talk about his being starved out of Kettletas was a joke. His mother is traveling in Europe and has means. He told me so himself. I have drawn the hundred dollars saved from my school teachings out of the bank, and you are to pay it on the mortgage. I put it by to get a new cloak and furs next winter, but now I shall make the old things answer. You are to do exactly as I say. You must keep him on here, and act as if nothing had happened, and I'll pledge my life he will clear himself in time. I shall start to-morrow morning on a visit to Uncle Hiram, at Bell's Cove, and if he doesn't clear himself and come out bright and shining like the sun, I will never come back to Littlefield so long as he stays in town."

"But suppose I should speak to him and he should try to lie out of it?" asked Mrs. Bissell, now submissive to her girl's will. "Oh, dear, I did like him so much. I trusted him as if he had been my son, and, Anne, I am so sorry for you."

Anne did not ask why her mother was sorry for her, but she intensified her autocratic tone, knowing that she was well under her thumb. "You must not think of speaking to him, mother. You must treat him exactly as if nothing had happened."

THE CROPS.

The report in the Bulletin by the Department of Agriculture for the month of August is as follows:

Corn—The average condition of this crop has been reduced within the last 30 days nine points. It now stands at 91½. If it has not been seriously damaged by the late August rains, the prospect for a good crop is fair.

Cotton—The cotton prospect, under favoring climatic conditions, has materially improved since last report. The majority of reports were in hand by the 20th of August, before the heavy rains set in, hence the present average of 73½ may be high.

Rice—The present condition of the rice crop is reported at 86 in this State.

Sweet and Irish Potatoes—The condition of these crops are respectively 89 for the former and 87½ for the latter.

SAMPSON.—Cotton weed very fine, but not fruiting very well, and now shedding some; other crops fine; fruit common; sweet potatoes good; very little tobacco made in this county; hogs dying from cholera; not much improved stock.

The N. C. Lumber Trust.

At a meeting of the lumber dealers from New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina, in Norfolk last week, a lumber combination was formed to be known as the "North Carolina Dressed Lumber Company." Minimum capital, $200,000 and the maximum $2,000,000. They are especially interested in the pine lumber of our state, and they are to control the business in order to get better prices.

Among the North Carolina lumber men who were elected directors are: T. B. Hyman, Goldsboro; W. L. Parsley, Wilmington; D. J. Aaron, Mt. Olive; J. S. Knight, Edenton; H. Corwin Jr., Elizabeth City.

The March of Christ.

SERVICES OF SACRAMENT SUNDAY AT DR. TALMAGE'S TABERNACLE.

The Lovely Surroundings of the Advent and the Signs in the Heavens--Details of Christ's Separate Walks from Bethlehem to Calvary.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 27.—This is Sacrament Sunday at the Brooklyn Tabernacle. The services as usual on these occasions were very solemn and impressive. The morning service opened with the Long Meter Doxology. The grand offertory by Grison was exquisitely rendered by Professor Henry Eyre Browne, and the service closed with the majestic "Coronation" hymn. Dr. Talmage's discourse was on "The March of Christ Through the Centuries," and his text Revelation xix, 12. "On his head were many crowns."

May your ears be alert and your thoughts concentered, and all the powers of your soul aroused, while I speak to you of "the march of Christ through the centuries." You say, "give us then a good start, in rooms of vermilion and on floor of mosaic and amid corridors of porphyry and under canopies dyed in all the splendors of the setting sun." You can have no such starting place. At the time our Chieftain was born, there were castles on the beach of Galilee, and palaces at Jerusalem, and imperial bathrooms at Jericho, and obelisks at Cairo, and the Pantheon at Rome, with its corinthian portico and its sixteen granite columns; and the Parthenon at Athens, with its glistening coronet of temples; and there were mountains of fine architecture in many parts of the world. But none of them were to be the starting place of the Chieftain I celebrate.

A cow's stall, a winter month, an atmosphere in which are the moan of camels, and the bsaing of sheep, and the barking of dogs, and the rough banter of hostleries. He takes his first journey before he could walk. Armed desperadoes with hands of blood were ready to snatch him down into butchery. Rev. William H. Thompson, the veteran and beloved missionary whom I saw this last month in Denver, in his eighty-sixth year, has described in his volume entitled, "The Land and the Book," Bethlehem as he saw it. Winter before last I walked up and down the gray hills of Jura limestone on which the village now rests.

The fact that King David had been born there had not during ages elevated the village into any special attention. The other fact that it was the birthplace of our Chieftain did not keep the place in after years from special dishonor, for Hadrian built there the Grove of Adonis and for one hundred and eighty years the religion there observed was the most abhorrent debauchery the world has ever seen. Our Chieftain was considered dangerous from the start. The world had put suspicious eyes upon him because at the time of his birth, the astrologers had seen stellar commotions, a world out of its place and shooting down toward a caravansary. Star divination was a science. As late as the Eighteenth century it had its votaries. At the court of Catharine de Medici it was honored. Kepler, one of the wisest philosophers that the world ever saw, declared it was a true science.

As late as the reign of Charles II, Lilly, an astrologer, was called before the house of commons in England to give his opinion as to future events. For ages the bright appearance of Mars meant war; of Jupiter, meant power; of the Pleiades, meant storms at sea. And as history moves in circles, I do not know but that after awhile it may be found that as the moon lifts the tides of the sea and the sun affects the growth or blasting of crops, other worlds besides those two worlds may have something to do with the destiny of individuals and nations in this world.

THE SYMPATHETIC STARS.

I do not wonder that the commotions in the heavens excited the wise men on the night our Chieftain was born. As he came from another world and after thirty-three years was again to exchange worlds, it does not seem strange to me that astronomy should have felt the effect of his coming. And instead of being unbelieving about the one star that stooped, I wonder that all the worlds in the heavens did not that Christmas night make some special demonstration. Why should they leave to one world or meteor the bearing of the news of the humanization of Christ? Where was Mars that night that it did not indicate the mighty wars that were to come between righteousness and iniquity? Where was Jupiter that night that it did not celebrate omnipotence incarnated? Where were the Pleiades that night that they did not announce the storms of persecution that would assail our Chieftain?

In watching this march of Christ through the centuries, we must not walk before him or beside him, for that would not be reverential or worshipful. So we walk behind him. We follow him while not yet in his teens, up a Jerusalem terrace, to a building six hundred feet long and six hundred feet wide, and under the hovering splendor of gateways, and by a pillar crowned with capital chiseled into the shape of wheretores and hows and whens they pull their beards with embarrassment, and rub their wrinkled foreheads in confusion, and putting their staff hard down on the marble floor as they arise to go, they must feel like chiding the boldness that allows twelve years of age to ask seventy-five years of age such puzzlers.

Out of this building we follow him into the Quarantania, the mountain of temptation, its side to this day black with robbers' dens. Look! Up the side of this mountain come all the forces of perdition to effect our Chieftain's capture. But although weakened by forty days and forty nights of abstinence, he hurls all Pandemonium down the rocks, suggestive of how he can hurl into helplessness all our temptations.

And now we climb right after him up the tough sides of the "Mount of Beatitudes," and on the highest pulpit of rocks, the Valley of Hatin before him; the Lake of Galilee to the right of him; the Mediterranean sea to the left of him, and he preaches a sermon that yet will transform the world with its applied sentiment. Now we follow our Chieftain on Lake Galilee. We must keep to the beach, for our feet are not shod with the supernatural, and we remember what poor work Peter made of it when he tried to walk the water.

Christ our leader is on the top of the tossing waves, and it is about half-past three in the morning, and it is the darkest time just before daybreak. But by the flashes of lightning we see him putting his feet on the crest of the wave, stepping from crest to crest, walking the white surf, solid as though it were frozen snow. The sailors think a ghost is striding the tempest, but he cheers them into placidity, showing himself to be a great Christ for sailors. And he walks the Atlantic and Pacific and Mediterranean and Adriatic now, and if exhausted and affrighted voyagers will listen for his voice at half-past three o'clock in the morning on any sea, indeed at any hour, they will hear his voice of compassion and encouragement.

We continue to follow our Chieftain, and here is a blind man by the wayside. It is not from cataract of the eye or from ophthalmia, the eye extinguisher of the east, but he was born blind. "Be opened!" he cries, and first there is a smarting of the eyelids, and then a twilight, and then a midnoon, and then a shout. "I see! I see!" Tell it to all the blind, and they at least can appreciate it. And here is the widow's dead son, and here is the expired damsel, and here is Lazarus! Ever and Chieftain cries, and they live. Tell it through all the bereft households; tell it among the graves.

And here around him gather the deaf, and the dumb, and the sick, and at his word they turn on their couches and blush from awful pallor of helpless illness to rubicund health, and the swollen foot of the dropsical sufferer becomes fleet as a roe on the mountains. The music of the grove and household wakens the deaf ear, and lunatic and maniac return into bright intelligence, and the leper's breath becomes as sweet as the breath of a child, and the flesh as roseate. Tell it to all the sick, through all the homes, through all the hospitals. Tell it at twelve o'clock at night; tell it at two o'clock in the morning; tell it at half-past three, and in the last watch of the night, that Jesus walks the tempest.

THE KISS OF BETRAYAL.

Still we follow our Chieftain until the government that gave him no protection insists that he pay tax, and too poor to raise the requisite two dollars and seventy-five cents, he orders Peter to catch a fish that has in its mouth a Roman state, which is a bright coin (and you know that fish naturally bite at anything bright), but it was a miracle that Peter should have caught it at the first haul.

Now we follow our Chieftain until for the paltry sum of fifteen dollars Judas sells him to his pursuers. Tell it to all the betrayed! If for ten thousand dollars, or for five hundred dollars, or for one hundred dollars your interests were sold out, consider for how much cheaper a sum the Lord of earth and heaven was surrendered to humiliation and death. But here, while following him on a spring night between eleven and twelve o'clock, we see the flash of torches and lanterns and we hear the cry of a mob of nihilists. They are breaking in on the quietude of Gethsemane with clubs—like a mob with sticks chasing a mad dog.

It is a herd of Jerusalem "roughs" led on by Judas to arrest Christ and punish him for being the loveliest and best being that ever lived. But rioters are liable to assail the wrong man. How were they to be sure which one was Jesus? "I will kiss him," says Judas, "and by that signal you will know on whom to lay your hands of arrest." So the kiss which throughout the human race and for all time God intended as the most sacred demonstration of affection, for Paul writes to the Romans and the Corinthians and the Thessalonians concerning the "holy kiss," and Peter celebrates the kiss of charity, and with that conjunction of lips Laban met Jacob, and Joseph met his brethren, and Aaron met Moses, and Samuel met Saul, and Jonathan met David, and Orpah departed from Naomi, and Paul separated from his friends at Ephesus, and the father in the parable greeted the returning prodigal, and when the millennium shall come we are told righteousness and peace will kiss each other, and all the world is invited to greet Christ as inspiration cries out, "Kiss the Son lest he be angry and ye perish from the way"—that most sacred demonstration of reunion and affection was desecrated as the filthy lips of Judas touched the pure cheek of Christ, and the horrid smack of that kiss has its echo in the treachery and debasement and hypocrisy of all ages.

As, in December, 1889, I walked on the way from Bethany, and at the foot

Mr. Pell is a young man, brainy, energetic and progressive, and we predict for the News a great success. It is now one of our very best weeklies, and one of interest in every respect. Clean, spicy and newsy.

A Mistake.

A notice printed elsewhere and many such, printed and commented on about the Georgia legislature refusing to endorse the Ocala platform turns out to be false. So it is with the reports about Polk apologizing in Kansas for going in the Southern army, and about an attempt being made to tar and feather him. Be patient, farmers, when you hear such reports of the Alliance and its leaders, for "murder will out" and you will hear the truth.

A HOSPITABLE PEOPLE.

(Special Correspondent.)

We had occasion to visit Cathrian Lake, Onslow county, last week. We stopped a short time at all intermediate post offices on the route from Teachey's to the Lake. We found the people along this route kind, courteous and obliging. They cannot be beat anywhere for genuine Southern hospitality.

The crops are good, especially corn. Some wheat above the average, cotton, about two-thirds; potatoes, peas, sugar-cane, chufas and scuppernong grapes, good; and turpentine orchards doing well.

This section of the country is inhabited by an honest hard-working yeomanry, with whom genuine, sound Alliance princles will be the ruling passion. They are solid for Polk, Butler and the Ocala platform. Nothing more, nothing less. They don't believe in any of puny arguments of the secular press, and publications about 'over-production' "farmers keep out of politics" and other such rot. They know they need financial relief. More more money in circulation in which to develop the natural resources of their great country.

We arrived at the lake after the King of Day had gone behind the western hills, and night had enveloped that beautiful lake. But we walked by starlight down on the shore. And we thought of long ago when the noble red man hunted for game in this forest, paddled his canoe on the bosom of this lonely and peaceful lake, pitched his wigwam on its banks and wooed his beautiful dark-browed "darling Minnehaha," and the pines that have stood sentry over the lake for centuries, as the wind sprang up a gentle night breeze and sang a lullaby in our ears this reminded us that we were tired and sleepy. We were up early the next morning and off for the railroad, and while passing through Duplin we met many of the Alliance brethren. We tried the political pulse and found that old things have passed awap and all things have become new. Our people are for men and measures to bring about needed relief.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucus surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient streagth, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure.

(Special Correspondent)

We have just had a big revival of several days, conducted by Rev. Daniel Reid, in which much good was accomplished.

Our school is still increasing and improving. There are about forty pupils enrolled. Prof. Throp, of Southport, is teaching and everybody is very much pleased with him.

Miss Mittie E. Monroe, of Wilmington has been visiting in our little town. She will visit relatives in Bladen next week.

Miss Talmadge Throp, of Southport, entered school here last week.

Mr. W. J. Parker has returned from the Northern markets, where he has been buying his Fall stock of goods.

Miss Mattie Bronson, of Lisbon, will commence the public school here in a few weeks. She taught here last year and gave complete satisfaction.

Mrs. Tabitha Lewis, wife of Mr. J. C. Lewis, died on the 23d instant. She was over 70 years old, a good, lovely christian lady.

Charlie Houston, the little babe of Richard and Lonnie Houston, died on the night of the 28th instant. He is now at rest where pain and suffering are unknown. ADMIRER.

The March of Christ.

of Mount Olivet, a half mile from the wall of Jerusalem, through the Garden of Gethsemane, and under the eight venerable olive trees now standing, their pomological ancestors having been witnesses of the occurrences spoken of, the scene of horror and of crime came back to me until I shuddered with the historical reminiscence.

In further following our great Chieftain's march through the centuries I find myself in a crowd in front of Herod's palace in Jerusalem, and on a movable platform placed upon a tesselated pavement Pontius Pilate sits. And as once a year a condemned criminal is pardoned, Pilate lets the people choose whether it shall be an assassin or our Chieftain, and they all cry out for the liberation of the assassin, thus declaring they prefer a murderer to the salvation of the world. Pilate took a basin of water in front of these people and tried to wash off the blood of this murder from his hands, but he could not. They are still lifted, and I see them looming up through all the ages, eight fingers and two thumbs standing out red with the carnage.

THE AGONY ON CALVARY.

Still following our Chieftain I ascend the hill which General Gordon, the great English explorer and arbiter first made a clay model of. It is hard climbing for our Chieftain, for he has not only two heavy timbers to carry on his back, the upright and horizontal pieces of the cross, but he is suffering from exhaustion caused by lack of food, mountain chills, desert heats, whippings with elmwood rods and years of maltreatment.

It took our party, in 1889, only fifteen minutes to climb to the top of the hill and reach that limestone rock in yonder wall, which I rolled down from the apex of Mount Calvary. But I think our Chieftain must have taken a long time for the ascent, for he had all earth and all heaven and all hell on his back as he climbed from base to summit, and there endured what William Cowper and John Milton and Charles Wesley and Isaac Watts and James Montgomery and all the other sacred poets have attempted to put in verse; and Angelo and Raphael and Titian and Leonardo da Vinci and all the great Italian and German and Spanish and French artists have attempted to paint; and Bossuet and Massillon and George Whitefield and Thomas Chalmers have attempted to preach.

Something of its overwhelming awfulness you may estimate from the fact that the sun which shines in the heavens could not endure it; the sun which unflinchingly looked upon the deluge that drowned the world, which, without blinking, looked upon the ruins of earthquakes which swallowed Lisbon and Caraccas, and has looked unblanched on the battlefields of Arbela, Blenheim, Megiddo and Esdraelon, and all the scenes of carnage that have ever scalded and drenched the earth with human gore—that sun could not look upon the scene, so [illegible] its face a veil of cloud. It withdrew. It hid itself. It said to the midnight, "I resign to thee this spectacle upon which I have no strength to gaze; thou art blind, oh, midnight! and for that reason I commit to thee this tragedy!" Then the night hawk and the bat flew by, and the jackal howled in the ravines.

Now we follow our Chieftain as they carry his limp and lacerated form amid the flowers and trees of a garden, the gladioluses, the oleanders, the lilies, the geraniums, the mandrakes, down five or six steps to an aisle of granite where he sleeps. But only a little while he sleeps there, for there is an earthquake in all that region, leaving the rocks to this day in their aslant and ruptured state declarative of the fact that something extraordinary there happened. And we see our Chieftain arouse from his brief slumber and wrestle down the ruffian Death who would keep him imprisoned in that cavern and put both heels on the monster, and coming forth with a cry that will not cease to be echoed until on the great resurrection day the door of the lost sepulcher shall be unhinged and flung clanging into the debris of demolished cemeteries.

Now we follow our Chieftain to the shoulder of Mount Olivet, and without wings he rises, the disciples clutching for his robes too late to reach them, and across the great gulfs of space with one bound he gains that world which for thirty-three years had been denied his companionship, and all heaven lifted a shout of welcome as he entered, and of coronation as up to the mediatorial throne he mounted. It was the greatest day heaven had ever seen. They had him back again from tears, from wounds, from ills, from a world that never appreciated him to a world in which he was the chief delight. In all the libretto of celestial music it was hard to find an anthem enough conjubilant to celebrate the joy saintly seraphic, archangelic, deific.

But still we follow our Chieftain in his march through the centuries, for invisibly he still walks the earth, and by the eye of faith we still follow him. You can tell where he walks by the churches and hospitals and reformatory institutions and homes of mercy that spring up along the way. I hear his tread in the sickroom and in the abodes of bereavement. He marches on and the nations are gathering around him. The islands of the sea are hearing his voice. The continents are feeling his power. America will be his. Europe will be his. Asia will be his. Africa will be his. Australia will be his. New Zealand will be his. All the earth will be his! Do you realize that until now it was impossible for the world to be converted? Not until very recently has the world been found. The Bible talks about "the ends of the earth" and the "uttermost parts of the world" as being saved, but not until now have the "ends of the earth" been discovered, and not until now have the "uttermost parts of the world" been revealed.

The navigator did his work, the explorer did his work, the scientist did his work, and now for the first time since the world has been created has the world been known, measured off, and geographized, the lost, hidden and unknown tract has been mapped out, and now the work of evangelization will be begun with an earnestness and velocity as yet unimagined. The steamships are ready, the lightning express trains are ready, the printing presses are ready, the telegraph and telephone are ready, millions of Christians are ready and now see Christ marching on through the centuries. Marching on! Marching on!

This dear old world whose back has been scourged, whose eyes have been blinded, whose heart has been wrung will yet rival heaven. This planet's torn robe of pain and crime and dementia will come off and the white and spotless and glittering robe of holiness and happiness will come on. The last wound will have stung for the last time, the last grief will have wiped its last tear, the last criminal will have repented of his last crime and our world that has been a straggler among worlds, a lost star, a wayward planet, a rebellious globe, a miscreant satellite, will hear the voice that uttered childish plaint in Bethlehem and agonized prayer in Gethsemane and dying groan on Golgotha, and as this voice cries "Come," our world will return from its wandering never again to stray. Marching on, marching on!

THE GLORIOUS FINALITY.

Then this world's joy will be so great that other worlds besides heaven may be glad to rejoice with us. By the aid of powerful telescopes, year by year becoming more powerful, mountains in other stars have been discovered and chasms and volcanoes and canals and the style of atmosphere, and this will go on, and mightier and mightier telescopes will be invented until I should not wonder if we will be able to exchange signals with other planets.

And as I have no doubt other worlds are inhabited, for God would not have built such magnificent world houses to have them stand without tenants or occupants, in the final joy of earth's redemption all astronomy, I think, will take part, we signaling other worlds and they in turn signaling their stellar neighbors. Oh, what a day in heaven that will be when the march of Christ is finished! I know that on the cross Christ said, "It is finished," but he meant his sacrificial work was finished. All earth and all heaven knows that evangelization is not finished, but there will come a day in heaven most rapturous.

It may be after our world, which is thought to have about fifteen hundred million people, shall have on its decks twice its present population, namely, three thousand million souls and all redeemed, and it will be after this world shall be so damaged by conflagration that no human foot can tread its surface and no human being can breathe its air, but most certainly the day will come when heaven will be finished and the last of the twelve gates of the eternal city shall have clanged shut, never to open except for the admission of some celestial embassage returning from some other world, and Christ may strike his scarred but healed hand in emphasis on the arm of the amethystine throne and say in substance: "All my ransomed ones are gathered. The work is done. I have finished my march through the centuries."

When in 1813, after the battle of Leipsic, which decided the fate of the Nineteenth century, in some respects the most tremendous battle ever fought, the bridge down, the river incarnadined, the street choked with the wounded, the fields for miles around strewn with a dead soldiery from whom all traces of humanity had been dashed out, there met in the public square of that city of Leipsic the allied conquerors and kings who had gained the victory—the king of Prussia, the emperor of Russia, the crown prince of Sweden—followed by the chiefs of their armies. With drawn swords these monarchs saluted each other and cheered for the continental victory they had together gained. History has made the scene memorable.

Greater and more thrilling will be the spectacle when the world is all conquered for the truth and in front of the palace of heaven the kings and conquerors of all the allied powers of Christian usefulness shall salute each other and recount the struggles by which they gained the triumph and then hand over their swords to him who is the Chief of the conquerers, crying: "Thine, oh Christ, is the Kingdom; take the crown of victory, the crown of dominion, the crown of grace, the crown of glory." "On his head were many crowns."

Blood diseases are terrible on account of their loathesome nature, and the fact that they wreck the constitution so completely unless the proper antidote is applied. B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) is composed of the true antidote for blood poison. Its use never fails to give satisfaction.

LOCALS.

—Monday is Commissioners day.

—The cotton gins have been at steady work for past week or two.

—There was a very good market for cotton Saturday. Seventy-five bales were bought.

—Now is the time to pay your subscription. If you can't pay all, make a partial payment,

—Mr. R. C. Southerland has moved his restaurant in vacant store opposite to J. E. Royal's.

—Several of our barkeepesr in town are making preparation to get out of business just as soon as possible.

—The Methodist church will be ready to receive the candidates for admission next Sunday. Service by Rev. J. M. Ashby.

—Attention: We hope our subscribers will help us now. If you can't pay all, help us some. We appreciate all your help.

—The cotton market here has been very good so far. The prices paid have been as good as those of Fayetteville and Goldsboro.

—Mr. R. C. Holmes is making some very nice improvements at his new house. He will have a very pretty house, when finished.

—M. Hanstein's store will be closed on account of holiday this coming Saturday, Oct., the 3rd, and again on Monday the 12th of Oct.

—At the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and night forty-eight were received in the church. We were very sorry that Dr. Marable was too unwell to preach.

—There were an unusually large number of applicants to join the Odd Fellows at this weeks meeting. They have a very strong lodge here, and it is in a very flourishing condition.

—Our merchants are very busy getting their fall stock ready. A very full supply has been brought in, and our country people will find it will pay to at least come and examine the goods.

—While numerous persons of both sexes and all denominations showed a lively interest in the Fife meeting, we could not help noticing the earnest an active part taken by Messrs. W. G. Rackley, Thos. Hubbard and Buck Peterson. They were instrumental in getting Mr. Fite to come to Clinton, and were his mainstay during the meeting.—Pittsylvania (Va.) Tribune.

—Our good North Carolina Georgians boys are of the very best metal. Not only in business but in fun and they stand "tip top." We have received a very amusing, but indeed a very well gotten up piece of fun but owing to the absence of the editor chief, about whom it is written, we will not make him feel too good, by giving it to the public just now. But thanks boys for your kindness.

Hon. Jere Rusk to be Invited.

Hon. E. W. Kerr will leave in a few days for Washington to personaly invite the Secretary of Agriculture to be present on Thursday of the Sampson Fair, to make an address. Hon. Mr. Livingston of Ga., is to be invited to speak on Friday. Let us be up and get ready and have the biggest fair ever held in Eastern Carolina. Not only that but in the State. Sampson can do it and why not?

Subscriptions to Cotton Factory.

A. C. Garris, Eatman, Ga., 5 shares $100; H. H. Britt, Tifton, Ga., 4 shares, $80; Laurel Hill Lodge, 1 share, 20; J. R. Williamson, Haw River, 5 shares, $100; J. C. Killett, Haw River, 5 shares, $100; B. F. Hill, Tatum, Texas, 10 shares, $200; Mrs. A. E. Murphy, Clinton, N. C., 10 shares, $200.

A Baptizing.

Rev. O. P. Meeks administered the ordinance of baptism to sixty-six candidates at Royal's mill last Friday evening. An unusually large crowd was present, and everything passed off very nicely. Mr. Meeks baptized the sixty-six in forty-eight minutes.

Welcomed.

Mrs. Pocahontas Bumgardner, of Staunton, Va., and her two charming daughters, Misses Willie and India, have moved to Elliott, and will make it their future home. This is a very valuable addition to our entire community, and we wish them a very pleasant stay with us.

The Messenger says: Judge Boykin, one of the youngest, and decidedly one of the best Judges in the State, will hold the fall term of the Supreme court for this county next week, beginning Monday.

The many friends of Mr. L. C. Hubbard are glad to see him back after an extended visit to his relatives and friends in Connecticutt and Pennsylvania. He is looking better than we have seen him in a number of years.

YOUR ATTENTION IS CALLED

In This Issue to What the Following Parties Have to Say to the Public.

A. F. Johnson & Co. are now ready to show you a fine line of Dry Goods of every kind if will only examine their stock. Cheap for cash.

W. S. Partrick, being just back from the Northern Markets, calls especial attention to his Dry Goods, Shoes and Gents' Furnishing Goods stock. See what he says.

Mr. W. G. Rackley is interested in what you wear. So he calls your special attention to his ability to fully clothe you if you will only call on him and examine his stock.

R. W. Hicks has a valuable tract of land for sale in Sampson. See his advertisement.

Oranges, fresh from tree, can be ordered from F. E. Blocker, Blanton, Florida.

Read M. Hanstein's new advertisement. Its a dandy. He tells you plainly and frankly that he can sell you Clothing, Hats and Shoes cheaper than any house in the State. Why not try him? He has the biggest stock ever brought to Clinton. He has enough goods in the warehouse to fill another store.

Clinton to a Stranger.

We all remember very pleasantly Capt. L. H. Pig, of Chateam, Va., who was with us during the Fife meetings, and who endeared himself to our people. Capt. Pig who is editor of the Pittsylvania Tribune after giving a very able and accurate account of the meeting has the following to say oy Clinton:

Clinton, is a lovely little town the County seat of Sampson county. It has about 1200 inhabitants and several manufacturing estalishments, chief among which is the veneering factory; where wooden butter and lard dishes, berry baskets, and crates are made. A majority of the hands employed are boys and young girls. There are also in the town a saw mill, plainng mill, turpentine distillery, corn mill, and cotton gins. The court house and jail are disgraces to such a beautiful town and such a large and wealthy county. The jail ought not to be tolerated by a civilized community. We cannot believe that the law ever contemplated erring humanity, to be incarcerated in such a dark and dreary dungeon, certainly not for doubtful and trival offences.

Dr. Frank Boyette, who married Miss Lucie V. Bennett, of our town, resides here. He has been very successful in his profession, dentistry, and is President of the Dental Association of North Carolina. He has a lovely home, elegantly furnished house, and his front and back yards bloom with the rarest and choicest of trees and flowers. They have but one child a bright, charming and lovely little girl of two summers. We shall ever remember the kind and courteous treatment and cordial welcome extended us by the doctor and his wife.

During our stay we made many pleasant acquaintances, and in no town in which our stay was so short were we more hospitably treated by all.

A Noble Work.

The State Board of Public charities have a plan by which the several penal and charitable institutions throughout the state are to be inspected and their condition reported. The Board has appointed a visiting committee in each county whose duty it is to inspect and so ascertain the conditions and management of all jails, poor-houses, work-houses, &c. No compensation is given for these services. The committee for Sampson county consists of Messrs. Warren Johnson, Marion Butler and J. A. Ferrell. They visited the "Home for the Aged and Infirm" and the jail, and reported the condition of the jail as by no means modern, and cannot be considered safe, comfortable or wholesome. The report of the "Home" was more satisfactory. They found the land sufficient, desirable location and comfortable and commodious buildings, and everything necessary to make a comfortable home.

We are glad to know that the "Home" is in such a good condition and we hope to soon hear of a similar report of the jail.

IN MEMORIAM.

First ten lines free, 5 cents (half of advertising rates) for each subsequent line, counting 6 words to the line.

MRS. FLORENCE V. MURPHY.

At her home, Atkinson, N. C., Mrs. Florence V. Murphy, daughter of Mr. James L. Corbett, and wife of Mr. John A. Murphy, after a short but severe spell of typhoid fever, fell asleep. Born in Sampson county, near Black River Chapel, the most of her bright young life was spent beneath the spreading oaks and hospitable roof of the old homestead. During a visit to an older sister the writer learned to know and love Florence. As a child she was fond, generous and guileless—a rare quality in us all. Ever ready to run with willing feet on small services, and with unselfish thoughtfulness providing sweet surprises for me, while a guest in her home. Bright and cherry and droll in speech, she has provoked many a hearty laugh from the writer of this simple tribute to her memory.

During her school life, at home and Peace Institute, I saw nothing of her. Soon after her education was finished however, I met her again and was rejoiced to find her so little altered by the "dust of change"—my bright, frank, but some what blunt child-friend, had developed into a modest pure hearted good woman. Her married life though so short, was an unusually happy and congenial one. Perhaps this was why she yielded up her life so easily. The happiness though so short-lived—only ten months—had been so perfect she felt God had given her all she deserved. No complaints left her lips at the suffering laid upon her, no repining at the summons to leave her devoted husband and loving family and go through "death's cold sullen stream." But "songs in the night" burst from her fevered lips, and rang out with strange, sweet pathos, on the summer air.

During her conscious intervals she spoke with regret of leaving "husband and loved ones", but at the same time expressed her resignation to her Saviour's will. Yet so young, so bright, so promising was this sweet young life, our tears must have way. But we "sorrow not as those who have no hope," but are pursuaded that she has reached the "shining shore" and "anchored safe within the vale."

"She is at home! She is well, she is happy, she will never know a bereavement nor another day's illness, or the infirmities of old age; she has got the secret of perpetual youth. The real comfort is that God never makes mistakes; that He would not have taken her from us, if He had not a reason that would satisfy us if we knew it." Bereaved and sorrowing husband we bid you

"Go and tell Jesus, well He knows
The human heart, its pangs, its throes;
He will not fail thee, He will be Friend, Comforter and Peace to thee."

J. A. W.

TOBITHA LEWIS.

was born March 22, 1817. She made a profession of religion about 1840, under the ministry of Rev. Henry Gray. She lived a consistent, happy christian. She was not a light under a bushel, but on the candle stand and gave light to all in the house. For fifty years or more she lived for God. In her last days she insisted upon all who come to her room giving their hearts to God. After such a life we are not surprised that she died shouting, September 23, 1891. She leaves a husband, one brother and three sisters to mourn her departure. God grant that they may all meet her in the sweet by and by. J. M. ASHBY.

SO MAY IT BE.

The defeat of Sherman, the enemy of the people and friend of the plutocracy, would create great rejoicing throughout the land. The old man—the author of mortgages—the man who filled the country with more broken down men and more poverty than any other man living in the United States, has served the rich men much too long, must be retired.—Rural Home.

RUSK SEES IT.

I am one of those who believe that the farmer in politics has come to stay. More, I am of those that, in spite of possible, nay, inevitable, blunders on the part of men comparative'y untried in the conduct of public affairs, the presence and influence of the farmer in politics will ultimately prove beneficial to the country at large.

Do not ask the farmer to be satisfied with his lot on the ground that by comparison with some other period of time he is better off than people were then; it is an unreasonable request. The surest guarantee to the stability of any government is to be found in the enjoyment of equal privileges by all classes of its citizens, and a just distribution among them of the benefits as well as the burdens of the political structure.—Farmers' Advocate.

OFFICE ALLIANCE PUB. CO.,
239 North Capitol Street,
Washington, D. C., Sept. 22, 91.
(Regular Correspondent.)

It is often a source of encouragement and gratification to review the incident, trials, success and failures in the past, than take the bearings of the present and compare notes, that a correct conclusion may be reached as to the success or failure of one's life work.

The changes in life are generally so gradual and so void of anything startling to make them, that a man very often becomes great and good, or very corrupt and degenerate, without perceptibly realizing that any progress has been made either upward or downward; therefore I think it the duty of every individual, or of every organized body of individuals, too often measure the heights to which he may have climbed that all the satisfaction, courage and hope possible may be realized from one's efforts if he has been successful, and on the other hand, if one's life has been a failure, the sooner he begins the investigation the sooner the fact will dawn upon him that a change in his plans must be had, or the next mile post in life will find him still further downward in the scale of human existence.

While indulging in the above line of thought it occurred to me that our organization, the National Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union, was about to pass another mile post in its history, and that it would, perhaps, be of interest to every member if he could be brought to a true realization of his present surroundings as compared with those of the past, and have each member to properly understand and appreciate and know to what heights our Order has climbed in strength, education, fraternity and zeal.

It is my purpose here to give the world a few plain facts as they have transpired along the rugged road that has been traveled by the Farmers Alliance. It shall be more particularly directed to our Order as a national organization, for its failure or success is directly measured by the failure or success of its component parts; therefore the failure or success of the national will correctly measure the standing of the Order, whether in State, county or subordinate Alliances.

The national was first organized on the 21st day of January, 1887, and was known at that time as the National Farmers Alliance and co-operative Union of America. It was composed of two States, Texas and Louisiana. Its aims and objects at that time were purely local, and you might say sectional for some extent, for the uppermost idea in those prominent in its councils seemed to be a great union of the farmers in the cotton growing States. Up to this time it was confined solely to Texas and Louisiana, and the whole time was taken up in pushing the work of organization to the exclusion of education and everything else, which act accounts to a great extent for the narrow contracted views of our people at that time compared with their views now. The farmers at this time knew that there was something wrong somewhere or somehow, and they imagined that the cause rested in the fact that they were paying too much for their dry goods and groceries, and they if by co-operation they could do away with the services of a large class of middlemen and thereby reduce the prices of what they had to buy all their troubles would cease, and they could go on their way rejoicing.

While the above ideas obtained among the great mass of us, it is but just to say, even at this early period of our history, that there were quite a number of men in the Order who understood the great economic conditions underlying all our troubles.

During the years 1887 the entire energies of the national officers were spent in extending the Order into other States, and when the national met at Shreveport, La., October, 12, 1887, there were ten States represented, showing a gain of eight States in that many months.

Great progress had been made, and the report of the committee on demands as adopted contains eighteen separate demands, containing all the essential propositions in the Ocala demands except the sub-treasury and land loan ideas. During the year 1888 negotiations between the officers of the National Farmers Alliance and co-operative Union of America and the National Agricultural Wheel resulted in both of these national bodies meeting in Meridian, Miss., on the 5th day of December of that year, the purpose in view being the consolidation of these two national bodies into one. After several day of hard and persistent efforts all differences were harmonized and a basis of consolidation was agreed upon. Great enthusiasm prevailed, and the delegates and officers returned to their homes to push the work of organization and carry out the plan of consolidation as agreed upon. Our leaders realized at this time that the success of our efforts would depend largely upon the educational work of our order, and acting upon this conviction, steps were taken to establish a national organ that would discuss and educate our members upon the great economic questions of the day, which resulted in the establishment of the National Economist, at Washington, D. C., which has proved such a blessing and which is now so much appreciated by every member who reads it.

The year's work for 1889 had been successful, and the two great national bodies were united into one. The National Alliance met St. Louis December 3, there being eighteen States represented. At the same time the National Farmers Alliance of the North and West met in St. Louis, looking to a consolidation with our Order, but our hopes on that line were blasted by the schemes of a few wily politicians who came there on purpose to prevent consolidation. However, two States, Kansas and South Dakota, seceded and came to us anyway, increasing our number of States twenty.

The work of this meeting attracted the attention of the whole country. Steps were taken to fill the bloody chasm and forever do away with sectionalism between the North and South. This fact greatly alarmed the politicians both North and South.

Up to this time headquarters of the National had been at Dallas, Texas, but the Order had taken on such gigantic proportions, it was thought best to open up headquarters at Washington, D. C., which was accordingly done on January 1, 1890.

At this meeting, the famous St. Louis demands and subtreasury plan were put forth to the world as the Farmers Alliance remedy for present conditions. Accordingly a legislative committee was elected, whose duty it should be to press these demands before Congress, which resulted in the introduction in both Houses of Congress of the sub-treasury bill which has been so much cursed by the politicians of this country.

Up to this time our Order had comparitively smooth sailing, as nothing had ever been formulated which aimed a death blow directly at the great enemy of the producer, "Wall street," but now it was different. Plutocracy with its characteristic keen perception say at once that the success of our plans meant the overthrow of their reign; so a consultation was had at once and fire was opened all along the line in the hope that we would be driven from our position and completely routed, to their delight. Senators and Congressmen boomed away with their cannons while the little politician joined it the chorus with his popgun. These men proclaimed to the world that we were badly divided on our demands, and even in our own ranks a great many men looked to the next meeting of the Supreme Council with misgivings and doubt.

During this year, 1890, we not only had to contend with enemies without but with traitors within. With unflinching courage, the several State Alliances, with but few exceptions, elected true and tried men as delegates the Supreme Council which met at Ocala, Florida, December 2, 1890. The suspense was almost painful. The world was curious to know whether the St. Louis demands and the sub-treasury plan would be endorsed after a years' harsh criticism and discussion. The result filled the hearts of every true Alliance man with pride, new zeal and enthusiasm. At this meeting twenty-seven States were represented, and only four men could be found in that great body who would vote against the Ocala demands as they now stand, and these men have since dropped almost into obscurity.

The fight is still on. The ridicule and abuse of an unfriendly partisan press have done their best work. The private characters of our noble officers have been attacked, slandered, and villified, and in some instances they have been personally attacked and threatened with bodily harm, while two of our veteran editors have been mercilessly shot down. And yet the good work goes on, and encouraging news comes from every quarter. During this heated contest our ranks have multiplied and grown stronger; when traitors and corwards have fallen by the wayside, honest, brave men have risen up to take their places.

Education is doing its perfect work, and thousands upon thousands of our men and noble women are to day able to rout our enemies wherever met. We have more than two thousand newspapers that are being read by a membership greater than the population the United States in 1776, who are doing valiant work for our cause.

Everything is hopeful and encouraging, and when we take our bearings and compare notes with four years ago, it seems to me that every member of our Order should bow himself in the presence of Almighty God and pour out his soul in thanksgiving for the success we have attained and the blessed hope that lies out before us, that ere long we shall see every vestige of sectionalism and hate forever buried, our country once more united in fraternal love, and every man and woman a freeman.

A few short week and our Supreme Council will meet again, and it is very gratifying to know, that while the enemy has been annihilating, we have increased until thirty-five States will be represented at that meeting.

Let all our members take courage and resolve to do valiant work for our cause, for I rest secure in the belief that the God who came on earth to preach the gospel to the poor is our captain and will lead us to ultimate victory.

J. H. TURNER.

WOMAN'S SPHERE.

DRESS.

It is every woman's duty, first to herself, second to her family, and third to society to appear neat, attractive and to an advantage in every way possible.

HOME DINNER DRESS.

Princess gown in corn cambric, gathered at the waist and at the heart-shaped opening of the neck, which is bordered with a frilling in silk rope. Loose puffed sleeves set off with a bow in strawberry-colored silk corresponding with the girdle sash.—Courier-Journal.

ROYALTY AT WORK.

The daughters of the Princess of Wales, says Lady Elizabeth Hilary in the Ladies' Home Journal, are sensibly educated. They know how to sew so well that they can make their own gowns, and their knowledge of every art taught them is thorough. They can go into the kitchen and cook—cook well; they understand the art of bread making, and if they were thrown upon their own resources would be able to take care of themselves. Sweet-faced, healthy-looking girls, they are always gowned in the most simple manner, and work at their books and with pencil and needle in a way that would shame the daughter of a tradesman, who ought to thoroughly understand everything that is really woman's work.

THE HAIR.

Much is said pro and con as to the effect of salt water on the hair. When properly applied salt water is not only not injurious, but is an excellent tonic. If allowed to remain in a damp mass, however, it will cause the hair to fall out. The strands should be carefully combed after the bath and not put up until perfectly dry.

Tar soap rubbed into the scalp before going in bathing helps to keep blond hair light. In such cases it is well to dry the hair in the sun. A three-cornered handkerchief of rubber that costs $2.60 is the only means of keeping the hair dry in diving and bathing. It should be tied turban-fashion as tightly as possible.

The hair curled constantly in one place engenders a fever which causes it to fall out. It is wise, therefore, to change from top-knot to Psyche, and thence to Langtry as frequently as possible.—N. Y. World.

FASHION NOTES.

Sailor hats of white felt are revived.

Beaded sets of girdle and collar end in a "rain" fringe.

Tiny wraps of lace have a deep V of lace, back and front.

Rustic ecru hats are trimmed with cherries and red ribbon.

Many gray suede Oxford ties are worn with silk stockings to match.

Velvet ribbon for millinery trimmings is on the list of to-be's for next season.

There is a lack of reddish brown shades in brocades, bengaline, satin, etc.

Some novelties show egg-shaped balls instead of the perfectly round polka dot.

Clear, dark-green shades will be in demand to combine with woolen dress goods.

A novelty in individual salts are canoe-shaped ones, with tiny silver paddles for spoons.

The fashion of wearing handsome coat bodices of material distinct from that of the accompanying dress skirt is gaining ground.

Sheer cotton frocks, like lawns and organdies, are trimmed with lace, skirt and bodice ruffles; also on the wrists and over the shoulders like a pointed bertha.

The abnormally high sleeve is passed, and a very few new French tailor gowns show a close coat sleeve tightly trimmed on the top of the arm, with the corresponding trimming at the wrists.

The new silk crepons are really beautiful, and great use is made of them as frills and fishus. Entire toilets of pink, lilac, cream and gray chiffon are imported. The fabric falls in most artistic folds, and while resembling crepe proper, are altogether devoid of the wiry stiffness of the badge of sorrow.

Few materials are prettier for dressy afternoon wear than the new printed crepons, they fall so softly, and the crindled grounds give such a subdued effect to the flowers with which the goods are patterned. A silk foundation skirt greatly improves the appearance of the dress, but this is by no means essential.

Cream, pink and ecru batiste gowns are very popular this year, fabric being barred, striped, flowered, dotted and bordered. The bodices are made in many ways, both simple and elaborate, but all the skirts are draped or hung over soft silk petticoats of the same shade as the outside material, the batiste gown having no foundation.—Journal.

DISMAL.

The meeting at Long Branch has closed. There were eleven accessions to the Church. They were baptised in South River Sunday by Rev. David Bullard. Rev. Dr. Harrell, who assisted in this meeting is now at Pleasant Union assisting Rev. Wm. Johnson.

Mr. Charlie Spell and wife, of Red Springs, has returned from a visit to friends and relatives near here. They were accompanied by Miss Lizzoula Spell, who will spend a few weeks visiting up there.

There was a re-union of the David Spell family near the residence of Sheriff James M. Spell on the 18th instant. It was an occasion of much joy and pleasure. A memorial sermon was preached by Rev. Love Culbreth which was very touching. A very impressive talk was also made by Rev. Owen Spell. After these services the crowd went out to dinner. I was one of the best and most plentiful ever seen around here. That day, too, was one of our most perfect. There was in fact nothing to mar the pleasure of it, and everybody enjoyed it to the fullest extent. SIE.

Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. FOR HEADACHE

NEW BUGGY SHOP.

I have opened a Buggy Shop at the Warren Johnson old stand. I make

BUGGIES, WAGONS,

ROAD CARTS and OX CARTS, and do ALL SORTS OF REPAIRING. I make TURPENTINE TOOLS. In fact anything done at a first-class Blacksmith Shop. I have not quit the HARNESS BUSINESS, but am making and keeping on hand a larger supply of

than ever before, and at the lowest prices.

You all know my reputation for good honest work. The work of the Blacksmith Shop will be of the same guaranteed honest quality as at my Harness Shop.

Bring me your work. Let me furnish you with what you need in my line.

Respectfully,

New and Enlarged Facilities AT W. T. WILLIAMSON'S BUGGY AND CARRIAGE FACTORY

My Factory is now run at full capacity. My heavy work is now done by steam power. I am turning out a large number of new style Buggies and Pheatons. We make to order, but always keep a few styles on hand for examination.

I will keep on hand a large lot of Western Buggies (open and top) and Roads Carts. They will equal in quality and are sold as low as any like goods in Goldsboro, Fayetteville or Wilmington.

Round Shaves, Hacks and all Edge Tools made and Repairing done on short notice.

HARNESS, WHIPS, COLLARS AND ALL HARNESS HARDWARE.

I will hereafter keep in stock. My Harness Department is under THE CAUCASIAN OFFICE, on Fayetteville Street, near my Factory.

Be sure to see my styles and get my prices before buying.

Respectfully,
jul8—tf W. T. WILLIAMSON.

JEWELRY AND CLOCKS!

I have just received a large lot of Elegant Jewelry. This I will guarantee to the purchaser to be just as represented. I sell no cheap, "fire gilt" goods but carry a STANDARD LINE OF GOLD FRONT GOODS. The attention of the ladies is called to the latest styles of BREAST PINS—they are "things of beauty!"

The old reliable and standard SETH THOMAS CLOCKS always in stock in various styles and sizes.

Repairing of Watches and Clocks and mending Jewelry is a specialty. All work I do is guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

Respectfully,
sep5—tf G. T. RAWLS.

WHAT { IS IT / HAS IT DONE / CAN IT DO } ?

"Compound Oxygen—Its mode of Action and Results," is the title of a new book of 200 pages, published by Drs. Starkey & Palen, which gives to all inquirers full information as to this remarkable curative agent, and a record of surprising cures in a wide range of chronic cases—many of them after being abandoned to die by other physicians. Will be mailed free to any address on application.
